Dear Prime Minister Starmer,

I am writing to you today to share with you my doubts about the way that the Government is currently treating asylum seekers in our country.

I find it rather unfair that these people are not treated like us other people. It is not right that there are people earning thousands while they're provided with a very small allowance per week. Unfortunately, they are not allowed to work, meaning they cannot treat themselves to things they like, like going to the cinema and enjoying a nice meal.

Also, these people are forced to live in rather basic or rundown hotels, whilst being forced to room with people they don't even know. The food they are living is below the ordinary standard which we eat. Instead, they are fed fast foods like chips more than once a day. Also, they have curfews where if they don't make it back into the hotel they are kicked out, it sounds more like a prison.

Sadly, it would be the wrong decision to make friends, as you are constantly move around to different countries, and you won't have much time to prepare. This is because the government are telling people a day before they must move.

I do hope you share my worries and concerns and will take urgent action.

Yours faithfully,

Lennan Jones
